Cons With the Olympics: the inner-city neighborhood of Tothwood, razed to make way for the Olympic Village

STICHALL AG

hension. As Olympic organizations storm town, people are getting evicted from their homes. Forty-six tenants were kicked out of their homes to make way for the Canadian Olympic stadium. And corporations such as Coca-Cola, Amstar-Benz, and The New York Times are trying to get in on the act—building a theme park, taking over apartment complexes, and displacing homeless shelters—all at the expense of the city's poor and working class.

Indeed, less than a month before opening ceremonies begin, Olympic bulldozers are still pruning the city's red clay, continuing a process in which developers have uprooted up to 15,000 homeowners, tenants, small businesses, and homeless people. Six years of preparation has cost some residents their homes, jacked up rents in a city with almost no tenant protections, and even left some people living on the streets.

As a founder of her community's tenants' rights group, Casey has followed the city's redevelopment wave from the front lines. On a sticky Saturday afternoon, she described neighborhood's crisscrossed fault lines. Stone Luckie Street, she pointed to a deserted street where the grocery store once stood. A few blocks, near Coke's world headquarters, the local library, now locked up.

Ever tried to sleep on an old-fashioned convertible sofa?

They're uncomfortable, expensive and now obsolete. There's something better—a futon sofa-sleeper. Futons: fish, functional furniture, with true comfort and restful sleep. Best of all, they're half the cost of a convertible sofa. Futon. The better sofa-sleeper.
